The data is used to increase the speed and intelligence of the ball, player animations and the on-field action. Real-life player movement data is used to enhance player actions and the way they move. This data is also used to improve the intelligence of the ball which comes up with AI tricks and more accurate, longer-range deliveries. In FIFA 22, players will run, pass, shoot and dribble at faster speeds than ever before on FIFA, FIFA Street and FIFA 18. They will also recover better from hard tackles and recover better from body shots, both block and head. Artificial Intelligence has been further improved, as players keep track of multiple targets. "Intelligent analysis" of ball duels is also added, as players understand where a ball is going even if one player doesn't receive the ball. FIFA 20 introduced new animations and new player traits such as lean and accelerate. FIFA 22 brings it all together, with 60 seconds of motion capture data from the English Premier League being used to bring the most realistic football simulation yet. FIFA 19 introduced the new "AI Zone Defender" system, making it the most realistic defender in franchise history. FIFA 22 implements the "AI Zone Defender" system. This system combines the AI Zone Defender and New Player Trait, and it responds to the ball perfectly. This allows for more defensive reactions, and intelligent interceptions, and is the foundation of more realistic defensive play than ever before. The AI Zone Defender will also react differently to different speeds of attacks, and it will decide how to defend based on different passing patterns. This will help improve the "Intelligent Analysis" of the defender and enhance more realistic defensive play. FIFA Street is introducing new AI and new animations to make it as realistic as FIFA and FIFA 2k. FIFA Street 2K gives the player new responsive and reactive controls for more balanced and accurate passing and more realistic dribbling and shooting mechanics. New animations will make players jump higher and land with greater force, impact the ball harder with head shots and make it fly at a higher speed. THE MATH WILL BE DIFFERENT This year's addition of real-life football simulation technology means that you will see accurate ball flight distances, more accurate player ratings and new animations that truly make your controller feel like a real piece of equipment. As players run, pass and dribble at higher speeds, the impact of their passes
